- Ah, there he is, lad, at the plow;
 He beats the boys for work,
 And whatsoe'er the task might be
 None ever asw him shirk.
 And he can laugh, too, till his eyes
 Run o'er with mirthful tasrs,
 And sing full many an old-time song
 In spile of seventy years.
- "Good morning, friends; 'tis twelve o'clock;
 Time for a half-hour's rest,"
 And farmer John took out his lunch
 And ate it with a zest.
 "A harder task it is," he said,
 "Than following up these steers
 "Or mending fences, far, for me
- To feel my seventy years.
- 'You ask me why I feel so young,
 I'm sure, friends, I can't tell,
 But think it is my good wife's fault
 Who's kept me up so well;
 For women such as she are scarce
 In this poor vale of tears;
 Charles given me love and hope and strength
 For more than forty years.
- "And then my boys have all done well,
 As far as they have gone,
 And that thing warms an old man's blood,
 And helps him up and on.
 My girls have never caused a pang,

TRAGEDY IN THE FOREST.

His companion shook his head. "I fear you are too sanguine. But you will see and judge yourself. There is to be an inquest at the Locks."

The Locks, as the name implied, were The re had always been a considerably. Close by was a gap in the Sonth mountain, which led to what was called the forest, a wild stretch of woodland, from five to ten miles wide, running between nearly parallel hills, and extending for some thirty miles from northeast to southwest. The name was well deserved, for excepting a few small houses, scattered here and there, the whole district was covered with its original growth of oak and chestnut, with here and there grim hemlocks and pines. The settlers were principally of German leseent, their ancestors having come from the Palatinate a century and a half before. They retained, in a remarkable degree, the manners and customs of the fatherland. Their houses were generally of stone, frequently with overhanging stories, and often with stone staircases built outside.

In one of the wildest parts of this forest, high up on a spur of the sandstone hills, lived, or had lived, old Wilnelm Stray, a usnrer, a miser, the cruelest of creditors, it was said, and a tyrant to his family and all under him. He was snpposed, however, to be the richest man in the county; and it was his only child who was now accused of

"It seems," said the District Attor-ney, "that his daughter has been clandestinely meeting a young man, and that her father hearing of it fell into a rage and threatened to turn her out of doors. There was nothing against the lover, anless it was his poverty. His futher, Colonel Wolcott, was once a member of Congress for the adjoining district, and he nimself a rising young lawyer. The girl had first met him at the house of an old school-mate. She was at Mrs. Collingwood's boarding school, as perhaps you know. Stingy as old Stray was, he appears to have wished his only child to be brought np like a lady. What passed in the interview between father and daughter is not fully known. The servant girl overheard angry words, but could not distinguish their purport; she was sure that just before the alterention was over, the father threatened to disinherit the daughter. Shortly after, the the old man left the house to walk to the Locks, where he intended to take the train to Berkton. Almost immediately Miss Stray followed. Within twenty minutes, a forgeman, going home, came on her in the gap, standing over the dead body of her father. Her agitation on being detected was, he says, conclusive exidence of her guilt. But this is only opinion. The damning facts are the quarrel: an intelligent with the control of the servant girl at however; she's believed to have saved money. She has probably should show any hoste in the control of the servant girl at how any hoste in the control of the servant girl at how any hoste in the control of the servant girl at how any hoste in the control of the servant girl at how any hoste in the control of the servant girl at how any hoste in the control of the servant girl at how any hoste in the control of the servant girl at how any hoste in the control of the servant girl at how any host in the servant girl at how any host in the quarrel; an intelligent motive for the deed; blood on the linen cuff of her right hand; and the finding of an orien-tal dagger, which she had long used for paper cutter, in a thicket close by, as if flung there when she heard the forge-man coming. The dagger was still wet with the orimson stain, by-and-by when

"What does the daughter say?" "Oh! she denies it of eourse. Says she had just discovered the body, and that she was horrified at the sight, a horror which the forgeman mistook for proof of guilt. The dagger, she declares, was last seen by her that morning on her table. The blood on her cuff she explains by saying she had stopped to see if her father was really dead, and so

"Well, I believe her." "That's because you know her and pity her. Who else could have done the deed? Who had any motive? Really." Vonr Indigment.
"Trust me for that," replied Mr. Mordaunt. "My intuitions in these matters have never misled me." you are too old a man, too experienced a lawyer, to let sentimental motives cloud your jndgment. Lord Bacon.

Francis Bacon was born ut London, Jan. 22, 1561. His father, Sir Nieholas Baeon, was Lord Keeper of the Great Seal under Elizabeth. Soon after completing his twelfth year, he went to Cambridge, where he distinguished himself. He traveled on the continent, and returned to England in 1579 on account of his father's death. In 1582 he was admitted to the bar, and in 1589 became a member of l'arliament, and in 1590 the head of "Latest In- Counsel Extraordinary to the Queen, a distinction almost without example for one so young. In 1606 he married Ahce Barnham, the daughter of a rich London merchant, and the succeeding year was made Solicitor General, and in 1613 became Attorney General and a member of the Privy Council; in 1617 he became Keeper of the Great Seal, and the following January was made Lord High Chancellor, the highest civil office to which any subject could then attain. In the following July he was created Baron Vernlam, and admitted to the House of Peers, and in 1619 became Viscount Saint Albans. In 1620 he published his greatest work, the "Novum Organim." He was accused of accepting bribes, and, though at first strongly asserted his innoequee, yet he afterward confessed his guilt, and was sentenced May 3, 1621, to pay a fine of £40,000 and to be imprisoned at the King's pleasure. He was shown every indulgence, being sent to the Tower but released two days after, and the fine was remitted. He was allowed un income of £1,500, a sum equal to five times that amount at the present day. He died April 9, 1862. His works are numerous, the best known being his hose case appeared to "Essays," the "Novum Organum," "Ou tment, was cured by the Wisdom of the Ancients," etc. He, is described as one of the most illustrious of modern philosophers. Princess Dolgorouki's Halr.

Princess Dolgorouki was remarkable for the beauty and abundance of her hair, and Court gossip tells us that, like many other great men, Alexander II. had been canglit in the filet d'amour, which, according to old Marot, the poet, captures the souls of men. The Emperor's admiration for the tresses of the Princess was so great that he often said to her: "If I die first I shall rest all the easier if that hair lies with me in my coffin." The impression on the mind of the Princess was so vivid, that at the very moment the news of the Emporer's death had reached her, she eut off with fair competence and the other poor, like her own hands the rich abundance of herself. Upon the death of her parents her tresses, and inclosed them in a scaled packet directed to the Empress, with a humble request that the late Emporer's unite her fortunes with those of the desire might be fulfilled. Moon. Nor is it to be marveled at, when we consider that this planet was to most brilliaut and changeable, as well as the nearest and apparently largest celestial body that presented itself to their nightly view, and that in the clear, exquisite ether of Arabian skies, and the calm nights of India and Egypt, it shone among the heavenly host with a luster unknown to dwellers in the crowded eities of a northern clime. But the children of these tropic lands did something more than gaze, speculate and admire. With supreme pntience they resred lofty towers and grand pyramids, and invented instruments which linve led us step by step to the transit instrument, the micrometer and the telescope of to-day. A college of astronomy was founded by the priesthood of Egypt, the worship of the moon growing out of their frequent use of her pictured or carved image in making their meteorological announcements to the people; as, for instance, when the Nile was about to overflow, warning heralds were sent through the streets bearing aloft the familiar symbols of the river goddess and | feet justice, that spots were pits or hot a gilded ligure of the moon in the phase it would present at the date of the ex-

Mineral and timber lands are now our most valuable assets. The pusturage lands are of nominal value apart from the mineral underlying them. Our renaining public lands, exclusive of Alasa, wore, in June, 1880, estimated as follows: Timber lands, 85,000,000 neres; coal lands, defined, 5,530,000 precious metal-bearing lands, 64,000,000 acres, but this area will be increased as the pasturage and timber lands are explored; lands in Southern States, agriultural, timber and mineral, 25,000,000; lands irrigable from streams, 30,000,000; pastmage, desert, including certain lands in Indian reservations and barrens, 565,000,000. The above is exclusive of Alaska. Sales of lands were first made in blocks of townships and of eight sections, but soon in tracts of 640 and 160 acres, and later of 120, eighty and forty acres. The pre-emption act of 1841 was a progressive step, giving a preference to actual settlers, also permitting them o pay for their lands with cash or warrants. But the most important of all our land laws was the Homestead act of 1862. Population and Production. It is the general belief that the new sus will show a total population of less than 49,000,000, and probably ,00,000. In round numbers, the popation of all the States and Territories 1870 was 38,500,000. If we have 0,000,000 now, the increase in ten years was 11,500,000, or very marly 30 per Lt. (22.87). Let us call it 30 per cent. At is an enormous increase upon so vast a capital as 38,500,000, and if it can be kept up during the next ten years the lation of the United States will, in $50, have reached 65,000,000, which is s much as the population of France and aly combined. But our increase in Ith and production is far greater. In (70) we had 52,900 miles of railroad
